

Alexander Dietz

As an attorney with over seven years of experience in private practice and working in the court system, my professional career has been rooted in the pursuit of justice through civil rights litigation and advocacy. I view the opportunity to serve on the civil rights section executive committee as an at-large member as a natural extension of my commitment to protecting civil liberties and contributing to a more equitable legal system.

I often represent individuals in civil rights matters, and have worked on cases addressing violations of civil rights in the context of law enforcement, prisons, and medical facilities for those with disabilities. These experiences have not only deepened my understanding of the legal and systemic challenges that civil rights plaintiffs face, but also strengthened my resolve to be a voice for equity and enforcement of civil legal protections for all.

I believe the Civil Rights Section plays a vital role in shaping the profession's response to ongoing issues and challenges facing people whose civil rights are threatened, and I would be honored to contribute to its mission through thoughtful engagement, collaboration, and service. I want to help the section grow and expand its programming for Washington practitioners who work to help protect civil rights.

I bring to this role a practitioner's perspective, a passion for justice, and a strong desire to support the Section's work in promoting education, awareness, and actionable change. I welcome the opportunity to work alongside fellow committee members to help further the Section's goals and ensure that our bar supports attorneys engaging in the important work of helping preserve civil rights for everyone.
